

GREEN Fodder:

Thoughts to Chew On from the PLAN IT GREEN team

April 14, 2010

In This Issue

Tell us who you met!

A request: if you attended the conference and made useful connections, please let us know. Either post to our Facebook fan page by clicking below or email Steve at salzman@greenwaypartners.net

facebook

Our Organization

For more information on Plan It Green, check out our website at www.humboldtplanitgreen.com

Dear Michael,

Plan It Green 4th Annual Building Green Communities Conference
Theme: Local Self-Reliance

We estimate that over 1000 people came to the Plan It Green Conference on April 3. The trade show was packed most of the day. The weather cleared up in time for the outdoor activities to be successful. The workshops were well-attended...at least those that began after 10 a.m. Dinner was packed!

We have to admit it, now. Our conference has become in part a festival. And why not, with Samba dancers, electric vehicles, a petting zoo, kid's zone and farmers market all part of the mix.?

Thanks to all of the volunteers, sponsors, farmers, 4H folks and exhibitors from near and far who made this happen.

To see a bunch more photos of the event, visit our Facebook fan page here:

facebook

And watch Humbytv over the next few

For article ideas
or to join this newsletter
list, please email
news@northcoastsbdc.org

weeks for video:
<http://www.humbytv.com/>

For more information, visit www.humboldtplanitgreen.org, or call 822-0597.

Green Reading

The carbon market continues to be a source of controversy. Here's  one take on how the situation is affecting farmers. Just click the green arrow.

Updates from the Plan It Green Family

A shout out to some of our many, many volunteers who worked particularly long and hard this weekend: all of the heirloom tomatoes, Genia, Heather, Beckie, David and Kirk.

This newsletter

This monthly newsletter goes out monthly to approximately 600 people in Humboldt County and, more and more, to people much further afield.

If you have a friend who should be part of this community, please forward this message to them.

All the best